U. S. CIRCUIT COURT--CHIEF JUSTICE S. P. CHASE, PRESIDING.

The court opened at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, Chief Justice Chase and Judge Bryan The court resumed the consideration of the case of the steamer Gary vs. steamship General Sherman. Libel for sa'vage. Magrath & Lowndes for libeliant; Porter & Conner for respondent. This case came up before the Chief Justice on appeal from the decree of Judge Bryan, allowing $7000 to the steamer Gary, for salvage. The Chief Justice, after

Magrath, Esq., for the Gary, and of James Conner, Esq., for the Sherman, modified the decree of Judge Bryan, and made the following hearing the evidence and argument of A. G.

Upon hearing the proceedings, evidence and arguments thereon, it is ordered and decreed that the libeliant do recover from the respondent the sum of $3500, with costs, in the District Court. United States vs. Wm. Morrison, et al

Debt on postoffice bond. D. T. Corbin, Esq., United States District Attorney, for the prosecution; James Conner, Esq., for defendant. The evidence in this case was read and the argument postponed to this morning. The following is the full opinion of the Chief Justice relative to the motion made on Tuesday, for the continuance of the case of J. M. Alston vs. John L. Manning, on the ground that the present jurors are not ofganized as the law directs:

The answer to the application for continuance, made in behalf of the defendant, must depend on the construction of the acts of Congress relating to juries.

If the proposition maintained by him is correct, that the jury now in attendance upon the court is not constituted in conformity with those laws, he cannot be required to submit his cause to its determination.

The only act which it is now necessary to those laws, he cannot be required to submit his cause to its determination.

The only act which it is now necessary to consider, is that of July 20, 1840. This act provides that the qualifications and exemptions of jurors in the courts of the United States shall be the same as in the highest courts of the State in which trials by jury are held, and that they 'shall be designated by ballot, lot or otherwise, in the mode practiced in such courts, as far as practicable by the courts of the United States and their officers."

The act of the State, in accordance with which was the mode of designating jurors practiced in the State Courts when the jury now here was selected, was passed in 1859. The rule of this court conformed to that act as far as practicable. It had been modified only so far as to strike out distinction on account of color. It retained, as the law of the State and the practice of the State Courts, a property qualification.

It is not decied that the jury was constituted according to the law and practice of the State until last year. Then the property qualification was abolished; and later, within the last two or three months, a rule has been prescribed for the selection of juries in the several counties, from the white and colored voters in the proportion of their respective members. And the question is, did these late laws become at once the rule of this court so far as to make void the designation of the jury selected in conformity with the prior law and the existing rule?

It is only necessary to look at the act of make void the designation of the jury selected in conformity with the prior law and the existing rule?

It is only necessary to look at the act of Congress to determine this question. That act does not make the acts of the State Legislature alone, but those and the practice of the State courts, theguides of the United States Courts in this matter. That practice, of course, is presumed to be in conformity with those acts, and is most readily ascertained by reference to them. But neither law nor State practice has instantaneous operation in the courts of the Union. The State practice can only be introduced as far as practicable, and rules are necessary to determine how far it is practicable, and to introduce it to that extent.

Accordingly the act provides that "the Courts of the United States shall have power to make all necessary rules and regulations for conforming the designation and impanelling of juries, insubstance, to the laws and usages now in force in such State."

This was done by the rule in conformity with which this jury was designated and impanelled.

In order that future changes in State law panelled.

In order that future changes in State law and practice might be incorporated into the practice of the national courts, the act proceeds to provide, "And, further shall have power, by rule, or order, from time to time, to conform the same to any change in these respects which may be hereafter adopted by the Legislatures of the respective States for the State Courts."

Legislatures of the respective States State Courts."

State Courts."

Under this provision, this court has power to provide, and will doubtless recognize the duty of providing, by rule, for the future designation of juries in substantial conformity with the recent legislation. But, until some rule or order has been made to that effect, that legislation order has been made to that effect, that legislation.

order has been made to that effect, that legislation has, and under the act of Congress can have, no operation here.

It follows that the present jury was lawfully designated and impanelled, and is not affected by the legislation referred to.

The existing rule rejects distinction on account of color. The law now rejects, also, distinction on account of property. It will be the duty of the court to provide, by rule, for the selection of impartial, intelligent and uprightin one word, competent—jurors, without regard to either of these adventitious distinctions.

The motion for continuance must be desied

The motion for continuance must be denied.
